Highlighted Session 1: Education for all. Mere rhetoric or reality?

This session will include presentations that address whether goals of the Education for All and the Millennium Development goals have been accomplished. This session will include sessions from any region of the world. The session aims to look at the contradictions and challenges in the efforts put forth by the Education for All movement. The central question that this session poses is: Is education for all- advancing effectively or regressing despondently? How do the underrepresented fare? The session also aims to look at solutions to address those challenges.

Highlighted Session 2: What does Education for All mean in 2014?

What do underrepresented children and youth around the world need today? This session will include presentations that address issues that have not been included or emphasized in the Education for All initiative. Issues that reflect today's state of schools. For example, issues of gender identity and LGBTQ issues, among others.

Highlighted Session 3: Expectations and Visions after 2015

Protecting Education as a Human Right. This session will include presentations that examine the legacy and promise of Education for All for protecting education around the world and for ensuring that it is treated as a human right.
